BLACK BOTTOM

1 This street was once part of Black
2 Bottom, a residential community that 3 was largely African American during 4 the first half of the twentieth century.
5 Due to segregation, the neighborhood
6 was mostly socially and economically
7 independent. Black-owned enterprises,
8 such as grocery stores, restaurants and 9 shops, occupied its street corners and 10 the business district along Hastings
11 Street. Churches and schools provided
12 residents with social spaces and a
13 sense of belonging. In the 1950s-60s,
14 the Detroit government razed most of 15 Black Bottom as part of its urban 16 renewal and "slum clearance" plan.
17 Lafayette Park and Chrysler Freeway
18 (I-375) replaced the community. Many 19 families were displaced and given no
20 resources for relocation. They retained
21 their connections to each other through 22 several Black Bottom churches that 23 endured into the twenty-first century.

BLACK BOTTOM

1 Named for its dark marsh soils, Black
2 Bottom was a neighborhood roughly
3 bound by Gratiot Avenue, St. Aubin
4 Street, Larned Street and Brush Street.
5 European immigrants settled here in 6 the mid-nineteenth century. Between 7 World Wars I and II it became home to 8 thousands of African Americans who 9 migrated from the South in search of a
10 better future offered by factory work.
11 Housing discrimination forced them
12 into neighborhoods like Black Bottom.
13 They paid overpriced rent and often
14 packed multiple families into single 15 homes as they built a new community.
16 Those who grew up in Black Bottom
17 included Coleman Young, Detroit's
18 first black mayor; Joe Louis, the world
19 heavyweight boxing champion from 20 1937 to 1949; and Ralph Bunche, the 21 first black recipient of the Nobel Peace
22 Prize, honored in 1950 for his role as a
23 mediator with the United Nations.
